The Morgan remained embedded in her sandy resting place until the 1938 hurricane ripped her loose. Now she is on display at Mystic, Connecticut, whose people recognized the great value of this link with the past and had the interest to preserve her.

YWCA ANNUAL DINNER-MEETING

Mrs. Robert M. McGregor, speaking to members, guests and community representatives, attending the YWCA annual dinner and meeting said that exciting things are going on in the world, and that Christian women must be the welding flame of humanity, doing all they can about both local and world problems. Women should not be thermometers registering only, but should be thermostats having some control.

All women the world over, Mrs. McGregor, stated, have the same desires, and goals, including freedom, sufficient income, security, education, growth and friendship. The YWCA in its program, Mrs. McGregor said, seeks to serve the needs of women that may vary in different areas and especially around the world. Women must use to the fullest latent resources, and "get in" actively to make the world fit to live in.

Mrs. McGregor said that because we have faith in God, and love for one another, YWCA members cannot escape their responsibilities to all people. Mrs. McGregor, wife of Rev. Robert F. McGregor, rector of Grace Episcopal Church in Providence, is active in YWCA work.

SOLO PARENTS MEETING

Solo Parents will hold another popular pot luck supper on May 23rd at the YWCA. Future plans will be announced about this, and also about the Nature Walk on June 3 or 4, for parents and children which includes a picnic and visit to Russells Mills Museum.

Solo Parents extend an invitation to men and women bringing up children alone because of death, divorce, or legal separation, including those without custody, to join their group for the pot luck supper and all meetings announced.

COUPLES CLUB ANNIV. BANQUET

The St. Anthony's Couples Club of Mattapoisett invites all interested couples to join in the celebration of their First Anniversary banquet at Thads Steak House in New Bedford on Saturday, May 27th, at 7:30 P.M. CMDR. HAYES: VIET NAM

COMMANDER SPEAKS ON VIET NAM

The Marion-Mattapoisett Kiwanis Club was host to Commander and Mrs. John Hayes of Water Street, Mattapoisett at their regular dinner meeting last Tuesday, May 9th. Commander Hayes, guest speaker, who has just returned from a tour of duty in Viet Nam, was introduced by the Kiwanis President, Llewellyn Roberts. Commander Hayes was commanding officer of the Vigilant before his recent tour of duty in Southeast Asia. While there, he commanded the 4th area as Task Group Commander, and acted as advisor to Viet military people in that section. The Coast Guard's duty is to prevent infiltration of men and materiel in the coastal area (a task for which they are especially fitted). Smuggling in of supplies by sea was a major problem and the Coast Guard patrol the coast in 50 ft. craft in a constant watch for such activity.

Commander Hayes outlined the major problems of this war. He explained that we are in a most complex situation because of the nature of the people and the country. The country is divided by topography into sharply different economic areas. North Viet Nam is industrial, the central area is a plateau and is the poor area and the southern part is the Delta region which is the rich rice bowl. In culture, there is great differences in language, in religion, in political thought and education.

The language, in particular, is a great barrier because it takes 10 to 12 years for a language expert to master it. The Commander explained that the French rule of the country did nothing to prepare these people for self determination. Under the French colonialists, the Vietnamese were never allowed to rise beyond the rank of Civil servant first class. Education in the mechanics of government thus was severely limited or lacking. He explained that when the French were defeated, in 1954, the Viet Minh, who were the victors, were comprised of both Communists and non-Communists, fighting together to rid the country of the French colonialists. This lack of a clear line of political demarkation carries over into the present, creating a very unique and difficult situation for those who have to deal with the political structure of the country.

Commander Hayes said that the Communist party has tremendous organization. Because of this, they are a strong force but they do make mistakes just as we do. He explained that a Viet Nam village is actually a collection of several Hamlets. The village is governed by a village chief. To date approximately 3,000 of these village chiefs have been assassinated by terrorists in an attempt to tear down the political structure at its very foundation. These terrorists and guerillas are, by day, quite ordinary people. They are peasant farmers, fishermen, wood cutters who go about their business in a normal fashion all day. By night, they are part of a squad of Viet Cong. They blow bridges, mine roads and kidnap chiefs. The Commander said that the Viet Cong have had no major victory in the last 18 months but the terrorist activity is constant.

According to the Commander, the political war is the most complex problem of Viet Nam and it is where we are having the least success. No war has been declared by this country. We are still there in an advisory capacity and the South Vietnamese are making important decisions. It is sometimes very frustrating to our people there that the Vietnamese will take time for an afternoon siesta and seem to lack appreciation of the importance of the war. The Vietnamese economy has been inflated by the great flow of American dollars. The more troops that arrive, the worse the economic situation becomes. The shaky economy, the political ineptness and lack of education must be corrected if the military victory is to have meaning. He said that it is possible here to win the war and to lose the country to Communists in the future unless education can teach the people to govern in a stable way. The Commander estimated the military phase of the war to be running very well with a successful conclusion in sight within a comparably short period of time. However, the political war may well continue for 8, 10 or more years. In this time the education of the whole nation must be undertaken to bring them up to a level where they can maintain a stable government.

The Commander stated that the quality of our young fighting men is extremely high. They understand what is happening in Viet Nam and they are well equipped and well trained. He said that the future is safe in the hands of young men such as these. The demonstrations against the war that are going on in the United States annoy them but they understand that this is part of the Democratic system. They are annoyed because they feel that the demonstrators lack understanding of the problem in Southeast Asia and its vital importance to the United States.

The Commander was warmly applauded for his very interesting background talk on the problems of the war. He will soon move to Washington with his family to take up his new post in the nation's Capitol.

On Wednesday, May 24th, there will be a recital and demonstration of modern dance technique at the Marion Art Center. Mrs. Peggy Brightman is instructor for the dance classes that the art center has sponsored this year for children, teenagers and adults. The wonderful creativity of children will be featured in this program as Mrs. Brightman's young class demonstrates their ability to improvise. It's very thrilling and exciting to watch. All the dancers will perform various exercises used in most every class period. Finally, the adult class will perform a part of a ballet which Mrs. Brightman choreographed for the Boston Ballet Company in a recent contest.

An Evening in May

"Mothers need to accept the new fashion trends for their daughters but not for themselves," was the advice given to more than six hundred mothers and daughters who filled the auditorium at Old Rochester Regional High School in Mattapoisett, May 9th, for an "Evening in May". A fashion show featured over eighty-five different outfits for day -- school and special occasions; and outfits for play -- fun and sun clothes, modeled by ORR students. Fashions were from Coburn Brothers of Wareham Plaza.

Guests were welcomed by Laura Escobar, president of the Student Council, and Mrs. Marian Severance, Dean of Girls. The commentator-coordinator for the event was Mrs. Winston Bendall.

During the intermission piano selections were played by Virginia Hayes and Paula Mogilni, students at the high school. Thirty-three door prizes, donated by local merchants, were awarded.

A social hour in the cafeteria followed the fashion show. Refreshments were served with Mrs. Donald Gavin, Mrs. Vera Jozefek and Mrs. Winifred Hartley attending the punch bowls.

JUNIOR GRANGE MEETING

Mothers of the Mattapoisett Junior Grange members were entertained last Friday night with a demonstration meeting.

Worthy master, Mark Harris, welcomed the guests and lecturer, Joseph Alves, presented the program. The Centennial Candle was on the master's station. A lecturer's march was held with Frank Jefferson, Jr. receiving the prize.

A kazoo band comprised of girls rendered several selections. A group of boys modeled ladies' wearing apparel of dresses and bathing suits, with Joseph Alves as commentator, and Mrs. Irene Tripp furnishing the music.

A Mother's Day poem was given by Christine Carson. The poem, "Mothers are-----" starting with "blowers of noses and washers of ears" etc. was given by Joseph Alves. It was a most enjoyable program.

The Juniors then presented their mothers with Maybaskets they had made. Lecturer Alves presented Mrs. Tripp with a Maybasket in appreciation of her piano accompaniment.

Robert Ouellette, master of Rochester Grange, was also an honored guest.

The master announced a score of 94.5 and read a nice letter from State Master, Frank Nelson, complimenting the Juniors on the fine work they are doing, especially Home and Community Service work. Mary Alcobia reported on the Community work for the last quarter.

Joseph Alves reported on agriculture. Ruby LeTourneau, Paula and Diana Whitaker were reported ill.

Mary Alcobia and Mark Harris were refreshment chairmen for the social hour. There will be a change in the lecturer's program for the May 26th meeting.

WHALING ADVENTURE DISCOVERED

Every so often someone comes across an interesting story preserved by chance. Mr. Harold Ambush, who deals daily with old items in his Legend Shoppe in Fairhaven, found this story in just that way. The brittle, yellow clipping was the padding in the back of an antique mirror. The clipping dates back to the 1800's so the story is told as a contemporary happening. We are glad to have it to print with our cover collection of rare photos of the whaling era. Our thanks to Mr. Ambush.

CAPT. ARCHELAUS BAKER SNATCHED FROM JAWS OF DEATH - AFTER FLOATING ABOUT IN SOUTHERN OCEAN ON FRAIL RAFT

Casualties at sea, in which the whaleships of New Bedford and vicinity have figured, would fill volumes. Shipwrecks, dreary boat voyages with their terrible sequel -- death from hunger and thirst -- might furnish material for adventure far more thrilling than any romance yet written. All this and more is the experience of many a whaleman who left home in search for that which years ago was the great wealth producer of the world -- the whale. No nobler class of men, no more skillful navigators ever trod a deck, than the whalemen of New England. It is to the whalemen of New Bedford and Nantucket that the navigator who frequents the Pacific today is largely indebted; for it was through their venturesome spirit that much of the perils of navigation in those waters have been removed. To the early navigators from the continent of Europe must be given the credit of discovery, but it must also be conceded that New England whaleman made easy navigation in those waters which, prior to whaling, was beset with great dangers. Not alone did these hardy sons of Massachusetts brave the perils arising from wind and wave, but they faced danger at every island touched, and it was only by the utmost vigilance that ship and crew escaped from the clutches of savages whose habits were but little known.

Special additive in today's Shell Heating Oil helps give more warmth per gallon, top heating performance

There's a new additive in today's Shell Heating Oil. Called FOA-5X, this Shell product works round the clock to protect your fuel system-from storage tank to burner head. FOA-5X helps reduce build up of heat-robbing deposits that can collect in critical areas of your burner. It lets Shell Heating Oil burn in a radiant, even flame. It helps reduce service calls and expense. The result: more warmth per gallon of fuel-top performance at minimum cost. Before you buy your next gallon of heating oil, call us. We will give you complete details about Shell Heating Oil with FOA-5X and about our service.

Glance over the history of American whaling industry and you will find all through its pages story of adventure. Told briefly, to be sure, yet with a force which is known to every person who has been reared with the air of ocean breezes in his nostrils. It needs no Clark Russell, with his vivid imagination in depicting a shipwreck or storm at sea, to enlighten the people of Nantucket or New Bedford as to these. They know from experience what these things mean. One need go back but half a century to learn of such sorrow, frequently at that, when experiences of this kind bereft many a family of its protector. Look over the pages of this record, and it is no uncommon thing to find but brief mention of the loss of this or that vessel. "Never heard from after sailing," "sunk at sea," "struck on a reef, a total loss," "missing," and similar mention is the only record of fact. Such was the fate of many a good ship which had sailed on whaling cruises with every prospect for a successful voyage, bright as the noonday sun.

It is but a few years ago that the people of this city were shocked by the disaster of the Sarah, which capsized just outside the entrance to Buzzards Bay, on the eve of a voyage. Three of her crew survived that disaster, and from them was learned the sad story of shipwreck. A similar incident which happened to one of the handsomest vessels that ever sailed out of Padanaram harbor is that which befell the bark Henry H. Crapo, on her second voyage, when but two of her crew were fortunate in being rescued from a watery grave. Only those advanced in years recall this disaster, for it happened nearly 50 years ago, a great many miles from home. The only mention of it in Starbuck's record is found in these words: "Lost at sea, January 19, 1857, with a full cargo of sperm oil; the captain and one man -- the sole survivors -- were rescued by the English steamer England." This is the brief record of the loss of that handsome craft. Neither Captain Baker, her master, or the Kanaka who was rescued with him, is living to tell us of that experience, but from men who knew Captain Baker and had heard him relate the experience something more definite of the loss has been learned.

The Crapo was lost in a squall in the Southern Indian ocean, homeward bound, shortly after leaving Madagascar, where she had probably touched for water. That squall came upon the ship and her crew like a maniac unchained, lashing the sea into a fury which made futile human effort to do battle, and it was only by sheer good luck that Captain Baker and one of his crew were saved. That crew, happy in the thought of returning home with a rich cargo, perished in a few short hours after the ship was struck. But for the rescue of Captain Baker from a small raft, "missing" would have been her only record. She was launched in the summer of 1852, and was built by Tucker & Cummings at Padanaram, for Captain Spooner Jenkins, one of South Dartmouth's lucky whaling masters in those busy days. She was bark-rigged, of 199 tons, and when she returned from her first voyage in less than 30 months, a full ship, paying for herself handsomely, it was no wonder that her agents were ready to build her captain a larger vessel, and the Benjamin Cummings, considered the flower of the whaling fleet, was soon launched and turned over to him. Thus it was that Captain Archelaus Baker, Jr., came to be master of the Henry H. Crapo on her second voyage, which proved so disastrous. When homeward bound everything was filled with oil, and it was this fact which undoubtedly led to her undoing, for everything in the way of provisions and stores were piled on deck to make room below for her cargo of oil. After she left Madagascar and before she could be made snug for the voyage around the Cape of Good Hope she was struck down by a heavy squall and, filling, caused the loss of all on board save the two mentioned. It was said by some that the bark was top-heavy, with spars disproportioned to her size.

Little did that crew of 22 men dream of such an ending, when on a beautiful summer day in June they sailed out of Padanaram harbor, with the cheers of encouragement and expressions of good luck ringing in their ears until well out of sight of land. It was on June 12, 1854, that she left the old stone pier near the Yacht club house for the beginning of this memorable cruise, and there was no prouder man in town that day than Captain Spooner Jenkins when his friend sailed away in command of the ship which he had watched from the laying of her keel to the set of every sail. The Crapo was given an old-fashioned whaleman's send-off, and there are several living in the village today who remember her departure, for the departure and arrival of ships then were events in which nearly every one was interested. It was none of your send-offs while anchored below, later towing out to sea, as is done today, but a clean start direct from the wharf where she fitted for sea.

The crew were largely American citizens, for Dartmouth took a pride in sending ships to sea manned by her own sons. There were a few from foreign countries, and these were principally Kanakas, then quite numerous in this section. There were but two Portuguese on the ship, a somewhat different finding than now, when a ship's complement is largely from the Western Islands, with never a Kanaka and but few Americans. Here is the list of men who left Padanaram that day, and it is safe to assume that the same men were on the ill-fated bark when she went down: Archelaus Baker, Jr., master; Elihu Akin, first mate; Elijah B. Devol, second mate; George A. Macomber, third mate; John Daniels, Fred S. Mosher and Theodore Lockwood, boatsteerers; William Brown, James Thomas, William H. Peckham, Reuben H. Mosher, Benjamin F. Page, Thaddeus Baldwin, John Williams, Daniel Turner, Joseph G. Shufelt, Antone Manual, Jose Rorotonga, William Crapo, William Moui, Joseph Francis, and Henry H. Crapo. Manual and Francis were the Portuguese on the vessel, and both Crapos, Moui and Rorotonga were Sandwich Islanders. The Kanaka who took the name of the bark went down with the vessel, while he who selected the name of William Crapo had better luck, and with Captain Baker was rescued by the British mail steamer England.

TALK ON VIET NAM AT YWCA

The Travel Club meeting Friday, May 19th, presents at 8 P.M. as guest speaker David P. Metcalf, Specialist 4, who has just returned from 14 months army service in Viet Nam, previously serving one year in Germany. At both times Mr. Metcalf was in the branch of public information, which is the service providing material for newspapers and magazines.

Mr. Metcalf, now 21, is the son of Ralph Metcalf of South Dartmouth, and joined the army two weeks after his graduation from Dartmouth High School in 1964. In the fall Mr. Metcalf plans to attend college, majoring in journalism.

Slides showing the living conditions of a soldier and local small town way of life among the Vietnamese, will illustrate his subject, "Daily Life of a Soldier in Compound".

The public is cordially invited to attend.

WHIST PARTY

The Mattapoisett Grange Thursday afternoon whist party will be held in the Grange Hall at 1:30 P.M. May 18th. Everyone welcome.
